Gungahlin edition

April 2019

New bus network starts 29 April

Canberra's new bus network will start operating on Monday 29 April, in time for the start of school term two.

Local services in Gungahlin will provide frequent, reliable connections to the Gungahlin Town Centre from all suburbs in the region, including the introduction of services into Moncrieff, Taylor and Throsby. From Gungahlin Place, customers can easily transfer to light rail using the same ticket, for services via Flemington Road and Northbourne Avenue to Dickson and Civic, or Rapid 8 bus services to Belconnen.

Give the new network a try with FREE travel during the first month for passengers using a MyWay card.

Margaret Hendry School in full swing

Margaret Hendry School in Taylor has officially started its inaugural year, able to cater to more than 700 students.

As Gungahlin grows, we've been increasing the number of places at local schools, including at Gold Creek School and Franklin Early Childhood School.

Margaret Hendry School has also been named Canberra's first zero emission school.

Message from the Chief Minister, Andrew Barr

Our city is growing, and that's why we're investing in a better public transport network to keep Canberra connected.

With stage one of light rail set to begin services shortly, the ACT Government is introducing a new, integrated bus network that will provide more buses, more often.

The new network will start later this month and includes more bus services on weekends and at night. We are significantly increasing our rapid bus network, with seven new routes providing services every 15 minutes between our town centres and CBD.

Centenary Hospital

continues to grow

The Centenary Hospital for Women and Children provides vital healthcare to women, children and adolescents from Canberra and the regions. Since opening in 2012, thousands of babies have also been delivered at the hospital.

Important upgrades and expansions continue this year. These will provide more special care nursery cots, inpatient beds, a new adolescent gynaecology area and mental health unit.

Better access to rental bond loans

Rental bond help is an interest-free loan, helping to meet the upfront costs of renting in Canberra.

→ Find out if you are eligible at act.gov.au and search 'rental bond loans'.

Pawsitive Therapy at court

A new program to help vulnerable people feel more relaxed in the ACT Courts is being piloted in Canberra.

The program involves a Therapy Dog from Guide Dogs NSW/ACT visiting the courts with their handler for a few hours each week.

Raising building standards

Exams for new Class A, B and C builders are now mandatory to be licenced in the ACT.

Some builders renewing their licenses will also need to sit the exam. This is part of an initiative to raise building standards in the ACT.

You can also check if a builder has been subject to any disciplinary activity in the past 10 years by searching on the Disciplinary Register.

Ward changes at Calvary Hospital

The northside's Calvary Public Hospital in Bruce has reconfigured some of its inpatient wards.

Each level of the Xavier Building is now dedicated to a particular clinical stream making it easier for patients to access inpatient services within Calvary Public Hospital.

These upgrades ensure Canberrans can continue to access better healthcare where and when they need it.

Better learning spaces for Gungahlin kids

Students at Ngunnawal Primary School are settling into their upgraded school facilities, including a new learning support area and outdoor courtyard.

They're enjoying the benefits of more comfortable and flexible learning spaces.

Upgrades continue to take place across public schools in Canberra, with a focus on the assistance of special needs students.

Easter bin collection

Waste, recycling and green bin collections will change slightly for the Easter break.

There will be no kerbside bin collections on Good Friday (19 April), with bins collected Saturday 20 April instead.

Explore space at Canberra Heritage Festival

Heritage
Festival
13 April to 5 May

In 2019 the Canberra Heritage Festival is exploring 'SPACE'.

Not just outer space, but the 'space' in our city, landscape and architecture. Walter Burley Griffin once said "architecture is a space art".

More than 200 events will take place across the Canberra region.
